A multipage website is a traditional type of website that comprises multiple interconnected web pages. Each web page typically serves a distinct purpose or contains specific content related to the website's overall theme or topic. Navigation through the website is facilitated by a menu or navigation bar, allowing users to easily access different sections or pages. Multipage websites often include a homepage, about page, services or products pages, contact page, and additional pages as needed. This structure enables comprehensive content organization and provides users with a structured and hierarchical browsing experience.
